

Juniata Sentinel.

A union of lakes, and a union of lands, A union no power shall sever; A union of hearts, and a union of hands, And the American Union forever!

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 7, 1867.

H. B. WILSON, Editor and Publisher

THE JUNIATA SENTINEL has the Largest Circulation of any paper published in this County. It is a Paper, truly local, ably conducted, a first class Localist, and well worthy of the patronage of every loyal citizen in the County.

GEN. GEARY'S APPOINTMENTS.

General Geary, the Governor elect, has announced the two prominent officers of his Cabinet. Benjamin H. Brewster, Esq., the new Attorney General, will enter upon the duties of that important office admirably equipped for all its responsibilities by long experience and profound study. The fact that his rare legal abilities are universally conceded, doubtless decided General Geary to offer him the post. Mr. Brewster's political opinions have been and are in accordance with the earnest men of the day, and none have gone farther in support of the radical remedies of Congress. The appointment of Col. Frank Jordan, as Secretary of the Commonwealth, was a fitting response to a very general movement in his behalf among the body of the Republicans of the State. His services as Chairman of the Union Republican State Committee during the recent campaign were so signal and so efficient, that, even if he had not proved himself to be equal to high official responsibilities by his abilities by his ability in the Senate of the State and his energy as the Military Agent of Pennsylvania, at Washington during the war, they would have attracted the attention of the successful candidate for Governor.

These appointments are highly auspicious of a successful and vigorous administration of the State government.

FREEDOM.

As slavery in the United States once had the influence to encourage the growth and strengthening of slavery in all parts of the world, so is the full recognition of freedom here exercising a vast power for good throughout Christendom. Indeed, the ultimate tendency of the extinction of slavery in the United States will be its abolition wherever it now exists. In Brazil the system of bartering in human flesh and blood has always been conducted with extreme barbarity. The percentage of the waste of property in man was always larger in Brazil than in any other country where slavery existed. But, suddenly, the policy is recognized by the unrelenting masters of Brazil, that slavery is a great moral wrong—that it is a ponderous social evil, to abolish which will be to confer infinite blessings on both the owner and owned. The example of freedom in the United States is doing its sure work in Brazil, where it is now predicted slavery is destined to be overthrown as suddenly as it was here. God grant that this may be true! The Spanish authorities are also bestirring themselves, if not at once to abolish slavery, at least to alleviate its horrors. The Captain General of Cuba has been instructed to exercise increased vigilance for the suppression of the slave trade. Police officers visit the plantations, and if any recently imported Africans are discovered held as slaves, they are at once set free, and at the expense of the planters returned to their native homes. There is something cheering in these signs of the times. They prove that the march of freedom is onward.

SENATORIAL.

The terms of fourteen Senators expire with the present Congress, viz: Messrs. Cowan, of Pennsylvania; McDougall, of California; Nesmith of Oregon, and Davis, of Kentucky; Sherman, of Ohio; Foster, of Connecticut; Kirkwood, of Iowa; Trumbull, of Illinois; Edmunds, of Vermont; Pomeroy and Ross, of Kansas; Cresswell, of Maryland; Brown, of Missouri; Fogg, of New Hampshire; Harris, of New York; Lane, of Indiana; Howe, of Wisconsin, and Nye, of Nevada. To fill these vacancies, elections have thus far been held as follows: Sherman, re-elected; Ferry, in place of Foster; Justin S. Morrill, in place of Edmunds; and Harlan, in place of Kirkwood; their policies being the same as those of the retiring Senators.

ANOTHER INDIAN OUTRAGE.

A despatch just received states that an Indian massacre of United States troops has recently taken place near Fort Kearney, in which some eighty men were murdered. The term murder can hardly be misplaced, since the most merciful and impartial mind, familiar with the antecedents of these roving tribes of the plains, would not hesitate to infer that if the savages were not in the wrong, it must have been under circumstances of an entirely novel nature. A careful and recent perusal of the very voluminous reports sent to the Secretary of the Interior by Indian agents and others, and visits made to the plains during the past year by two of our staff, who, while there, devoted attention to the subject, have inspired the conviction that the policy at present pursued as to these aboriginal fiends is entirely too weak and palliative in every respect. In the first place there should be no annuities issued to tribes, any portion of which are at war with the whites. Those who come in and make speeches and receive gifts declare that they cannot control the 'bad Indians,' of their tribe, when it is known to every man on the frontier that these same 'bad Indians' are only kept out for a few weeks at a time, and regularly resume their place in the village to be replaced by others—Since it has been admitted that white girls who have been subjected to every extreme of outrage and cruelty may be ransomed, there have been quite a number of such captives, and as a climax we have symptoms of a general war and interminable threats of preventing the construction of the Pacific railway. Continually at war among themselves, caring little for life, and goned by an insane lust for murder, the Indians of the plains, cunning, and yet utterly unreasoning, cannot, by any means, be kept from attacking the whites; and while their 'braves' are fifteen thousand strong and tolerably well armed and mounted, we may expect to hear of 'atrocities,' since no plan of merciful and conciliatory treatment has thus far been of any avail, except in a few isolated instances. Such a case was recently recorded by the Rocky Mountain News of a truly noble chief who devoted himself for weeks to incessant labor and travel to prevent his tribe and others from murdering the whites. But it is not worth while for the sake of these few to endure such horrors as we may expect from the many.

We, therefore, say let Government deal more with these red wretches by the strong hand, and give the control and punishment of them much more to the regular military frontier force than it has hitherto done. By this means we should insure justice at all times and a certain application of that punishment which at present so seldom meets the guilty.

UNDERVALUATION OF IMPORTS.

One of the most fatal influences now at work to depress American industry and productive enterprise, is the criminal practice on the part of importers at home and shippers in Europe to undervalue imports. By this means the manufactures of England, France and Germany are brought to the United States, at a rate of duty by which they can be sold to pay enormous profits, and at the same time successfully compete with the manufacturers of the same article here. The woolen manufacturers are not the only class of our producers who suffer from this system of undervaluation, but they are the first to point out and complain of the evil. The same system is doing its work on all the other manufacturing interests of the country. We are thus deprived of our legitimate revenues from imports, and made to lose, by the depression of our own productive enterprise, those sources of taxation which largely supply the treasury with means to carry on the Government. We hope that Congress will not only extend the necessary guards to protect the wool growers and manufacturers from the imposition of undervaluation, but that it will so legislate as to break up the system by which imports of all kinds are passed through our custom houses undervalued.

The President and His Cabinet are represented as being very anxious to cultivate a better feeling with the Radical leaders of the country and of Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General are said to be most solicitous to attain these objects. Viewed as a joke this is good. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General's hands are now dripping with the blood of the decapitated heads of honest Republican office-holders, and while thus gory they ask for the friendship of honest men. The laugh certainly comes in here.

It is estimated that the cost of intoxicating liquors drunk in this country annually is $5,000,000, that 60,000 persons die annually from the use of strong drink and 200,000 orphans are made by it each year.

JOHNSON vs. GRANT.

In the beginning of his message the President says: "The enforcement of the law is no longer obstructed in any State by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceeding, and the animosities engendered by the war are rapidly yielding to the beneficent influences of our free institutions, and to the kindly effect of unrestricted social and commercial intercourse."

In his late annual report to the President General Grant says: "Passing from civil war of the magnitude of that in which the United States has been engaged to governments through the courts, it has been deemed necessary to keep a military force in all the lately rebellious States, to insure the execution of law, and to protect life and property against the acts of those who as yet acknowledge no law but force. This class has proven to be much smaller than could have been expected after such a conflict. It has, however, been sufficiently formidable to justify the course which has been pursued."

Here we have the President and General Grant in direct opposition. Of course everybody knows that the President is mistating facts, and not General Grant.

THE IRISH REBELLION.

New York, Dec. 23.—A Dublin letter to the Sunday News says: "The government officials are frequently sold by stories that Stephens has landed at different points on the coast, keeping troops and gunboats constantly on the move." Phoenix Park, in which is situated the government powder magazine, has been surrounded by heavily armed cartridges, and Dublin Castle is protected by newly built palisades. Troops are continually arriving from England, and suspected Irish regiments are transported to England and the colonies.

Despite all exertions of authorities and patrols of military, midnight meetings for drill and exercise are held all over Ireland, and the people evidently are determinedly awaiting Stephens' arrival to rise in spite of the great odds against them.

Payment of the Pensioners of 1812.

State Treasurer Kemble is now having prepared, for each county in the Commonwealth, lists of the pensioners residing therein, which will be sent to the treasurers thereof, by whom the pensions due from the State to soldiers of 1812 will be paid. It is expected that these lists will be forwarded to the different County Treasurers in a very short time, when the semi-annual pension due on the 1st of January, 1867, will be paid.
